1. Background:

Moderate and Severe Acute Malnutrition (SAM) is a major public health issue. It increases the mortality risk of children under five years of age to upto 9 times or higher; according to the Rapid Survey of Children 2013-14 estimates around 3.7% of the under-five population, in Jharkhand, have a very low weight for height.

To address the situation, Government of India (Dept. of Health and Family Welfare) along with Indian Academy of Paediatrics recommends an integrated management of children with moderate and severe acute malnutrition. The holistic approach focuses on strong linkages between facility based treatment centres and a community based therapeutic care and feeding programme. The community based approach aims at provision of energy dense fortified ready to use therapeutic food which is nutritionally adequate for the child with SAM.

Government of Jharkhand is cognizant about the burden of SAM in the state and has created Nutrition Mission which is mandated to work towards eradication of malnutrition with a special emphasis on the SAM and MAM children. Jharkhand government also has an approved strategy on C-MAM.

Therefore, to initiate the appropriate and adequate nutritional treatment at the household level a specific therapeutic food is required. The food is part of the nutritional treatment and is meant only for the child afflicted with SAM. This food must be of good nutritional quality as per WHO standards; safe for use in children with SAM, free from microbial contamination and toxins (as per the quality control standards of WHO for such therapeutic foods); must have low moisture content (<2.5%) to prevent growth of pathogenic micro-organisms during storage; consumed directly, requiring no cooking; must be homogenous with no oil separation; have a long shelf life (24 months); and be highly palatable for the child with a good taste. It has to be in the form of spread. And the spread should be made of powdered ingredients embedded in a lipid rich paste, so as to avoid any kind of microbial contamination. It must be a mixture of milk powder, vegetable oil, sugar, peanut butter and powdered vitamin and minerals. At least half of the proteins must come from milk/dairy products. It should have good consistency and texture that is suitable for feeding to children with SAM. Also the key food ingredients should be available locally.

EDTF is not water based, which means that bacteria cannot grow in them. It is a therapeutic food, which is high in energy, protein, and lipids and fortified with vitamins and mineral and is packed in a ready to eat form. This food should be soft or crushable and should be easy to be eaten by young children.

2. Nutritional Composition: The details of the composition of the therapeutic food are as follows:
